DEATHS.

Here, on the 20th curt., Henrietta, third daughter of Mr John Commelin, jun.

At Airdrie, on the 17th curt., Mr Thomas Montgomery, whose real worth as a man was enhanced by his tried fidelity as a friend.

At Sanquhar, on the 15th curt., Jean Ross, in the 91st year of her age. The deceased, though poor, was a pious worthy woman; for nearly twenty years she was aided, if not supported, by the bounty of the public. The climate of Sanquhar and Leadhills, much as the land is elevated above the level of the sea, must be exceedingly salubrious. Every now and then we hear of persons dying in these districts at the advanced age of from four to five score years.

At Creebridge, on the 23<sup>d</sup> inst, of croup, after a few days illness, Alexander, eldest son of Mr M'Laurin, agent for the British Linen Company at Newton-Stewart, aged 3 years and 11 months. This is the third case of croup that has occurred in the small village of Creebrige [sic] in the course of last week, two of which proved fatal, notwithstanding the most active treatment by that skilful and excellent man, Dr Smith.

At Cummertrees, on the 15th current, Mr John Owen, aged 63, who for 43 years was schoolmaster and elder in that parish. Mr Owen was one of those men who do honour to their profession – of sound moral and religious principles, great independence, strict integrity, and ardent philanthropy. Although Mr Owen was not a classical scholar, yet his attainments in several other branches of knowledge, particularly geometry and navigation, were at once profound, accurate, and extensive. In his family he was an affectionate husband, and a kind and attentive father. In his little kingdom – his school, a zealous and successful teacher. His death will be long lamented by his relatives and friends, and his memory cherished by his numerous pupils.

At Bath, on the 26th current, aged 41, after a lingering illness of five years' duration, Mr John Robson, draper and tea dealer, son of the late Mr James Robson, Killbain, Kirkmahoe, Dumfries-shire. He was a man of the strictest integrity, and his urbanity of manners, and charitable disposition, endeared him to a numerous circle of friends. During the lengthened period of his sufferings his mind was ever cheerful and resigned, arising from a perfect faith in the truth of revealed religion.

At Bath, Mrs H. Bowdles, of the small pox, at the advanced age of 70. She was the author of some admired sermons, but the modesty and simplicity of her character kept her talents always in the shade. She was a true Christian – meek and humble because truly wise.

At Liverpool, on Monday, 22d instant, Euphemia, wife of Robert Kennan, Pembroke Place.

At New-York, on the 8th February last, Mr James Martin, late writer in Dumfries.

DEATHS.

Here, on the 11th curt., Mr Christopher Armstrong. For a quarter of a century and more, he devoted much of his time to public affairs, was an elder of the Church, treasurer to the Session, and repeatedly held the office of Dean of Guild. As public Almoner, his death has left a blank that cannot be supplied; and though ever prompt in relieving the deserving, he was, at the same time, wonderfully quick in detecting and tracing imposture through all its manifold doublings and windings. Publicly and privately, he conciliated esteem by his cheerful, social, obliging disposition; and in his own family, no man was more remarkable for the exercise of those domestic virtues which render the happiest spot on earth.

On the evening of Tuesday last, at Glencaple Quay, near this place, in the 21st year of her age, Johnanna Macmillan, fourth daughter of Mr Joseph Balieff, hat-manufacturer here. During a painful and protracted illness her patience was most exemplary and edifying; her early piety and humility of disposition endeared her to her friends, by whom her memory will long be cherished with affectionate remembrance.

At Wigan, lately Mr W. B. Williams, to Miss Catherine Cron, late of Graitney, near Annan. On the 4th curt., at Chapmanleys, Mr Robert Douglas to Miss Nancy Wilson. This wedding was most numerously attended and the provisions that were laid in for the occasion might have satisfied a half-famished garrison; the "mountain dew" was equally plentiful, and after tea, when the party adjourned to the barn to shake their heels, there was seen such an assemblage of youth and fashion, and such was the boisterous and hearty expression of mirth, that the like has rarely been known in Troqueer.

DEATHS

Here, on the 8th current, Adam M'Turk, Esq.

At Dalkeith, on the 9th current, after a short but severe illness, Mr James M'Diarmid – as kind a hearted man as ever existed. He was extensively known, and where known, not only respected but beloved, for qualities that would have shed a lustre on any station. To his more immediate friends who will long affectionately cherish the memory of his piety, integrity, unassuming manners, and obliging disposition, his death leaves a blank that cannot be supplied.

At Hunthill, parish of Tinwald, on the 7th current, Mr James Smith, farmer there.

At Rashgill, on the 9th instant, John, son of the late Mr Robert Bryden, Clouden, aged 27.

On the 11th curt., at Bellfield, in Crawfordmuir, James M'Queen, Esq., aged eighty-nine. Universal benevolence as a man, and placidity of temper as a friend, uniformly marked his character; he performed upwards of sixty years the duties of a Justice of the Peace, with undeviating rectitude, and was one of three of a domestic establishment, with a surviving brother, whose united ages amounted to three hundred and fifty five.

At Gatehouse-of-Fleet, on the 6th instant, Mr Andrew Stewart, mason there.

At Manchester, on the 10th instant, Thomas, youngest son of Mr Thomas M'Caa, spirit merchant, Gatehouse-of-Fleet.

At Gatehouse-of-Fleet, on the 20th current, Mr Samuel M'Taggart, tailor, in the 79th year of his age. The above veteran tradesman was highly esteemed; for more than sixty years he plied his vocation as a master tailor, and accumulated considerable property by economy and industry. In the early part of his career he cut and fashioned female as well as men's apparel; an art in which he foiled every competitor, and as dressmakers were the unknown in Galloway, he was employed by all the principal families, and monopolised to a great extent the trade. "Sixty years since" ladies as well as lords were proud to employ him, and no man exhibited more fully the folly of Rousseau's well known maxim – that the sword and the needle were never meant by nature to be wielded by the same hands.

On the 21st instant, at Greenbrae, Elizabeth, wife of James Halliday, Esq.
At Rhonehouse, on the 13th inst., William Porter, aged 15. His death ws [sic] occasioned by a fall from a horse.

DEATHS

At Annan, on the 28th ultimo, George Pool, Esq. of Bush, one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Dumfries – after a lingering illness, borne with Christian fortitude and resignation. Many, with whom he was only connected by those ties which unite the whole human race in one great brotherhood, have ample cause to deplore his irreparable loss; he clothed the naked, fed the hungry, and befriended those who had no friend-ship from man.

At Ringanwhey, in the parish of Crossmichael, on the 27th ult., after a short but severe illness, Mr John Watson, parochial teacher there for the last 26 years. He was an able and indedefatigable [sic] teacher, and an inoffensive upright man. Although his acquirements as a scholar were very considerable, he was remarkably modest and unassuming in his manners.

At Culreoch, parish of Girthon, on the 29th ult., in the 26th year of his age, much and deservedly esteemed and respected through life, and whose death is deeply lamented by his relations and a large circle of acquaintances, Mr Alexander Galloway, youngest son of the late Mr Alexander Galloway, farmer, Culreoch.

At Brownhill, Keir, on Friday se'ennight, Janet M'Call, wife of Mr Charles Campbell, slater, aged 27. The deceased was much respected beyond the sphere of life in which she moved, and was possessed of a genuine but unaffected piety.

At Kirkcowan Village, on the 24th ult., Mr Andrew love, innkeeper, sincerely regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

At Chapmanleys, Mr Robert Douglas.

professional character, of very considerable scholarship and attainments, of upright principles and conduct, of honourable ambition, and who, had his valuable life been prolonged, would assuredly have attained to eminence.

At Sanquhar, a few days since, John Fingland, shoemaker, aged 73 years. The deceased had a singular itching after political information, and during the late French war, the names of the generals belonging either to Britain or France, were as familiar to him as the members of his own family. So strong and retentive was his memory that long after the events had passed by, he could give not only the exact time of their accomplishment, but a general opinion how the fields were either lost or won. About 40 years ago, by some misfortune, his leg had to undergo amputation, during which he looked on with undaunted courage, and declared the operator a mere bungler, and averred that if he could have got to it himself he could have done it much better and more expertly.

At Plescow, in Russia, a husbandman, named Michofsky, at the extraordinary age of 165. His mother lived to 117, and one of his sisters to 112.

Here, on the 24th ult., Benjamin Bartlett Buchanan, M.D.

On the 23d current, at Millhouse, near Kirkcudbright, Mr John Graham, aged 64.

At New York, on the 20th September, Robert Gillespie, Esq., merchant, second son of the Rev. John Gillespie, minister of Kells, and brother to the late Rev. William Gillespie, of the same parish – a man of sterling worth and genius, whose generosity, accomplishments, and social qualities will long live in the recollection of his friends.

The deceased was bred a merchant, had been for many years resident in New York, spoke fluently a number of languages, and had visited professionally almost every country in Europe. In New York he was very highly esteemed, and his death, almost in the prime of manhood, has excited everywhere the liveliest regret. Warmly attached to his native country, he was the friend of every Scotsman that visited New York, his philanthropy was only bounded by his means, and numerous are the instances in which he exerted himself with the greatest success in assisting young men to get forward in life. Personally we deeply deplore his loss, and are not aware that we ever knew a man of more general information, courteous manners, and kindly dispositions.

At his house, in the parish of Kilmuir, Isle of Skye, on the 10th ultimo, Lieutenant Soirle Macdonald, at the very advanced aged of 106. He expired not of any particular complaint, but merely from decay and exhaustion of nature. He has left three children under ten years of age.

At New Montland Manse, on the 9th current, Hugh Begg, student, son of the Rev. Dr Begg, New Monkland, aged 15 years.

At Farnham, in Surrey, on the 11th instant, the right hon Lady Charles Kerr, relict of the late Lord Charles Kerr.

On the 19th instant, Clementina, wife of Vice-Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm, K.C.B.

At Helensburgh, on the 11th instant, after a severe illness, the ingenious Mr Henry Bell, the practical introducer of steam navigation into Europe. His constitution had been greatly broken down for many years, and his bodily sufferings were frequently very great. His "ruling passion," scheming, was strong to the last, and the advice of his best friends failed to check this impetuous disposition. It involved him in many difficulties, but the benefits derived from his successful experiments in the steam propelling system are of such magnitude as to insure a grateful remembrance of his name.

30th November 1830

BIRTHS

Here, on the 29th current, Joseph, posthumous child of the late Mr Joseph Coulthard, saddler.

At Rosebank, parish of Dryfesdale, on the 13th current, Mr William Turner, farmer there.

At Arnmannoch Cottage, parish of Lochrutton, on the 23<sup>d</sup> current, Mrs Barbara Thomson, widow of the late Thomas Affleck, Esq. of Arnmannoch - a woman in whose heart there was no guile. Having a mind stored with gospel truths, and a heart devoted to the duties of religion, she never failed to inculcate these truths in season, and few it is believed ever left her company without a wish again to enjoy it - a conviction of their own deficiency - and a desire to imitate her virtues. She was also possessed of the means, and none had a more willing mind in bestowing charity, for she felt more happiness in relieving the needy, and adding to their comforts than to her own. In short, there are few who have gone down to the grave more deserving of esteem and remembrance, and whilst her family and relatives must lament her loss and revere her memory, it is the poor and the needy who will have most cause to drop a tear of sorrow for the loss of their kindest friend and benefactor.

At Laggan of Dunscore, on Monday se'ennight, Mr Alexander Blacklock, farmer there - deeply and justly lamented by his friends and acquaintances.

On the 17th ult., at Haugh of Urr, Mr William Lowden, late of Culmain, aged 79 years.

At Collin, on the 17th curt., by the Rev. Walter Dunlop, Mr Robert Linton, shoemaker, to Miss Mary Fisher.

At Nethermill, parish of Kirkmichael, on the 16th curt., William Small, weaver, to Isabella, daughter of Richard Shittleton, well known as an egg-gatherer in the surrounding counties. The ceremony attendant on the union of this modest pair, was more than usually attractive, from its being a regular pay-wedding, now a rara avis in our rural districts, and from the fair one, for some unexplained reason, having bilked a handsome Irishman, to whom she had been betrothed, and indeed proclaimed a few weeks since in the parish kirk. Such a bout has rarely been witnessed in the merry vale of Æ, and nearly the half of the parish can bear testimony to the "grandness of the occasion, and the unaccountable numerousness of the company;" the flow of whisky punch was exhilarating and plentiful in the extreme, and the number of jigs, strathspeys, hornpipes, and reels which were danced spoke well of the strength of lith and limb of the company. – The scene at the bedding is said to have been something past the ordinary powers of description.

DEATHS

At Allanton, on the 14th current, Elizabeth eldest daughter of George Whigham, Esq., of Halliday-hill.
