At Gatehouse, on the 2d curt., after a brief illness James Kirkpatrick, Esq., sn, elder of the church, as his father had been before him, a Country Magistrate, and more than once Provost of his native burgh. For many years he carried on business extensively as a general merchant, was a shrewd observer of men and things, and possessed a wonderful acute knowledge of markets and prices, including a wide range of the most varied commodities. For a longer period than we exactly know, he exported goods largely to Australia, visited the South as a purchaser periodically, not merely himself, but on account of others and in that capacity, made the acquaintance, and acquired the friendship of the leading commercial characters in the principal manufacturing towns of England. The bereavement thus noticed will create a blank, not only on the banks of the Fleet, but over broad Galloway; and there are many beside his family and relatives, who will regret the early removal of one whose untiring exertions had marked, commercially, the beautiful locality in which he drew the first breath of life and expired the last.
